JECME Special Collection: Innovation and Impact in CME/CPD

I invite you to contribute to the JECME 2022 Special Collection on “Innovation and Impact in CME/CPD”. The goal for this Special Collection is to highlight innovations in CME/CPD and the impact of engaging in CME/CPD across the professions, all stakeholder groups and around the world.

We are specifically seeking manuscripts that address, but are not limited to, the following categories:

- Team-based learning/interprofessional continuing education
- Point-of-care/just-in-time education
- Impact of CME/CPD on HCP practice and/or patient experience or outcomes
- Innovative delivery strategies/pedagogy
- Faculty development
- Impact/outcomes of engaging in lifelong learning
- Regulation/Standards/Policy
- Experiences of and impact for various stakeholders in CME/CPD
- Innovations resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic

We will accept the following types of manuscript

Research Article

Detailed report of a quantitative, qualitative or mixed methods study. Up to 4,000 words.

Brief Communication

Concise research findings or a discussion of issues/proposed solutions as they relate to the CME/CPD field. Up to 2,500 words.

Comment

A personal opinion or a new perspective about the CME/CPD field. Up to 1000 words.

- Consider contributing an “aha” or “Eureka” moment or a personal story that changed your perspective on CME/CPD.

Manuscripts must be submitted by 31 July 2022. The Special Collection will be published in October 2022.

JECME is an Open Access journal and the publisher requires that authors pay an Article Publishing Charge (APC). This is set at €1,365 for Research Articles and €910 for Brief Communications, Comments are free. Waivers and discounts are available, especially for authors from Low and Low-Middle Income countries, more information can be found here.
